7. Brief description:

The International Millet Year is a global initiative dedicated to highlighting the significance of millets in agriculture, nutrition, and cultural heritage. It's a year-long celebration focused on raising awareness about the value and versatility of millets, which are a group of small-seeded grains that have been integral to human diets for centuries.

The event aimed to promote these ancient grains as a solution for current challenges such as food security, sustainable agriculture, and nutritional diversity. Their adaptability to various climates and their nutritional richness make them an important crop for farmers and a valuable source of sustenance for diverse communities.

8. Outcome

The Department of Botany at Vivekanand College in Kolhapur celebrated the International Millet Year, 2023 and yielded several positive outcomes:

Hosting event like poster presentation and highlighting the event with preparation of different recipes on millets enhanced awareness among students, faculty, and the community about the nutritional and ecological significance of millets. This knowledge fostered a greater appreciation for these grains. Through lecture given by senior faculty, students and faculty at department of botany contributed to advancements in understanding the cultivation, environmental benefits, and nutritional value of millets. This could lead to potential research papers, presentations, and academic discussions. Encouraging the adoption of millets could promote sustainable farming practices among local farmers. Students and faculty might collaborate with local agricultural communities to demonstrate the benefits of integrating millets into farming practices. Hosting culinary events featuring millet-based dishes promoted the consumption of these grains. It also highlighted their cultural significance, thereby encouraging the preservation of traditional practices involving millets. This event marked a significant success by Vivekanand College for promoting the importance of millets to the students.
