Quiz on International Biological Diversity Day- 22nd May, 2021
Biodiversity refers to the various life forms that exist on earth, including animals, plants, microorganisms, and the entire ecosystem they live in. Biodiversity is the focus of biological sciences, including genes, species, organisms, and ecosystems. Thus, the four main levels of biodiversity are species, genetic, ecosystem, and global biodiversity. Because of their interconnectedness, biodiversity plays a fundamental role in maintaining the ecological value of the environment, as the complexity of the natural environment and processes that are all well being of all plants and animals. This calls for the need of biodiversity conservation for the survival of all living things and their natural habitat. There is an inextricable connection between nature and human life. We are dependent on healthy, diverse natural systems for our food and health in a major way. However, as may have been observed as International Day of Biodiversity to raise awareness about natural biodiversity issues.
Biodiversity conservation has three main objectives:
1. To preserve the diversity of species.
2. Sustainable utilization of species and ecosystems.
3. To maintain life-supporting systems and essential ecological processes.
Given the unique COVID-19 pandemic, Biodiversity Day now will be commemorated through an online-only campaign. You are in the best position to know what activities, raising campaigns and calls to action are feasible at your national level.
